No trip to the Capital is complete without a visit to London's vibrant, world-famous West End theatre district.

Hosting classic productions and award-winning shows, the West End flourished after the English Reformation, where visitors have sought entertainment ever since.

From the French Renaissance styled domes of Her Majesty's Theatre to the Art Deco design of the Apollo Victoria, these theatres are renowned for their star-studded casts, eccentricity and fun! A West End show is an incredible way to spend an evening.

APOLLO VICTORIA THEATRE

Opened in 1930 in an era of 'super' cinemas, the Apollo Victoria Theatre started as a majestic Art Deco film cinema. Its unique interior has been described as an imaginative, otherworldly setting – compared to a fairy cavern under the sea or a mermaid's dream of heaven. Having claimed more than 100 major awards, see Wicked performed at London's Apollo Victoria Theatre and follow the enchanting, untold story inspired by the famous witches from L. Frank Baum's much-loved tale, The Wonderful Wizard of Oz.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE

The beating heart of London's 'Theatreland', Her Majesty's Theatre is an iconic embodiment of the dazzling West End. Starting out as an opera house, it's now the respected home to the second-longest running show in the Capital, a timeless classic, The Phantom of the Opera. Immerse your senses into a collage of colour, elaborate costumes and dramatic stage production for an unforgettable visit to Her Majesty's Theatre.

NOVELLO THEATRE

Paired with the Aldwych Theatre, the Novello Theatre flanks The Waldorf Hilton in London's West End. Whilst its name has changed many times since its 1905 beginnings, it has consistently played host to entertaining shows including

No Sex Please, We're British, The Rat Pack: Live from Las Vegas and Footloose. Since 2012, it's been home to the award-winning MAMMA MIA!, written by British playwright Catherine Johnson and featuring music and lyrics by ABBA's Benny Andersson and Björn Ulvaeus. Get ready to lay all your love on this incredible show!

SONDHEIM THEATRE

Built in 1907, Sondheim Theatre is situated in Shaftesbury Avenue in the heart of London's glamorous West End. In 1913, it played host to the popular pastime known as Tango Teas, where audiences would go to sip on tea and be dazzled by talented tango dancers on stage. Formerly the Queen's Theatre, it was sadly the first theatre in the West End to be closed as a result of bombing in 1940. However, it successfully reopened in 1959 with John Gielgud's Ages of Man. In 1999, Dame Maggie Smith performed in The Lady in the Van. Today, it is home to some of the most renowned performances the West End stage has to offer.
